Dear Ohad Yaniv:

Thank you for your interest in the TI AM3517, AM3505, AM3352, AM3354, AM3356, AM3357, AM3358, AM3359 product families. Please be assured TI will not obsolete a catalog product merely for TI's convenience. TI recognizes its catalog products are sold to a wide variety of customers and used in a wide range of applications with expected production lifetimes in excess of 10 years.

TI commits to supply to Variscite the TI Product families in which you are currently interested for a minimum of 10 years following TI's general release date of the following TI Product families:

AM3517, AM3505, AM3352, AM3354, AM3356, AM3357, AM3358, AM3359

The general release date for AM3517 and AM3505 was June 2010. The general release date for AM3352, AM3354, AM3356, AM3357, AM3358, AM3359 was June 2012.

In the rare instance that TI makes the decision to end-of-life such TI Product after this 10 year period, we will give your company at least 12 months notice, allow your company to place orders for the TI Product during the 12 months after the end-of-life announcement, and allow your company to take delivery up to an additional 6 months after the 12 month notice period expires. TI trusts that this 18 month period will smooth any transition required due to any end-of-life.

TI's goal is to ensure our customer's continuity of supply for all TI products, and in keeping with that goal is making this commitment to you with respect to these TI Products. Please feel free to contact your TI sales representative if you have any questions or concerns regarding the Identified TI Products – or any other TI products – in which you are interested.

Very truly yours,

Texas Instruments Incorporated
